“Trust in him at all times, you people; pour out your hearts to him, for God is our refuge”. Psalm 62:8

I read in a devotional recently that with the new year to press on to new beginnings and not to look at the past or past failures. One way to do this is to move forward saying out loud “I trust You, Lord.” We can easily look around us and see so much that is wrong in this world and we talk about it out loud a lot. This negative talk affects us greatly. We need to also say in a loud voice, “but I trust You Lord”.

In second grade we are learning to say out loud our faith in the Lord and give less voice to our fears, worries, and failures. I am amazed at the love and compassion that this class has for me and each other. Yes, they are a competitive bunch, but they are there for each other and share their love.

We are also pressing on with our academics. Our focus this next marking period is writing good paragraphs, increasing our reading fluency, and mastering our math facts. We will be writing more stories and having some friendly competition with our math facts. In social studies we just finished learning about the Native Americans from each region in our country. We read how the area they lived in affected how they lived. The students made some awesome posters. We returned from our Christmas break for Hot Chocolate Day. The students wrote creative stories, brushed the dust off their math skills, learned about the church in Laodicea and how terrible it is to be a lukewarm Christian. We conducted a science experiment that showed how heat rises and of course enjoyed some hot chocolate.

We are continuing to press on, trusting the Lord to help us grow and learn, and sharing our love for one another. Second grade is awesome!
